Washington Grocers Urge You to Help Your Country and Yourself by Using Wrapped Bread

Why We Favor Wrapped Bread.
By H. W. FISHER & SON,
Groceries and Provisions,
Wisconsin Avenue and N Street,
Washington, D. C.

We believe that our customers prefer to have bread that has not been handled five or ten times—that has not been exposed to dust and germs. And we know that they prefer bread that stays moist and fresh until it is used, and retains its wholesome flavor until the last crumb is eaten.

Delicious to the Last Slice

By EIKER'S MARKET,
Poultry, Produce and Groceries,
18th and Penna. Ave. N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

Food experts tell us that the annual waste in stale bread in the United States is enormous. That is one reason why we recommend wrapped bread. It retains its fresh, wholesome flavor, and prevents the needless "stale bread" waste.

Help Save the Nation's Food
By JOHN E. SINCLAIR,
Dupont Circle Market,
Cor. 19th and Q Streets N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

When you throw out a few slices of stale bread, you are wasting a part of the food supply of our nation, at a time when such waste is perilous. This is one reason why we believe in the wrapped loaf. You can buy such bread plentifully with the knowledge that it will remain fresh and sweet and palatable until eaten.

Wrapped Bread Prevents Waste

By GEORGE CLAGETT,
Table Luxuries,
517 C Street N. E.,
Washington, D. C.

The American people are waking up to the fact that needless waste of food may peril the cause of democracy. And this is particularly true of bread. Many housewives are learning that a wrapped loaf is real economy because it does not dry out and become stale before it can be eaten. Certainly the wrapped loaf is cleaner and more sanitary.

Why We Recommend Wrapped Bread

By STEARN & FAWSETT,
Groceries and Market Supplies,
1355 Wisconsin Ave.,
Washington, D. C.

Although we take every precaution to keep our store clean, we believe the big pure food authorities are right in favoring the wrapping of bread. Especially in these war times when everyone must make all food go as far as possible, we believe in the idea that the wrapping of bread is worth-while, not only because it tends to hold the bread's flavor, but mainly because it tends to keep bread fresh and to reduce waste.

Why We Are Selling More Wrapped Bread
By F. W. SCHNEIDER,
Groceries and Provisions,
14th and A Streets N. E.,
Washington, D. C.

Washington housewives are doing their bit toward preventing food waste. And they find by experience that a wrapped loaf keeps its flavor and moisture until it is eaten. It tastes good right down to the last slice, and there are no stale "ends" to throw away. Re-wrapping the remains of a loaf in the waxed paper keeps it fresh until used.

Why We Endorse Wrapped Bread

By J. T. HOWARTH,
Groceries, Meats, Vegetables,
3402-3404 11th Street N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

We are as particular about keeping our store clean as the housewife is of her kitchen. But it is hardly possible that a loaf of bread that is handled five times or more is as clean as a loaf wrapped in waxed paper in a modern sanitary bakery. And wrapped bread keeps longer and tastes better because it retains the flavor and moisture of new bread until it reaches your home.

Why We Like To Sell Wrapped Bread

By J. W. WARD,
Grocer,
14th and Park Road,
Washington, D. C.

Wrapped bread is clean. It reaches your home just as it leaves the bakery, without a single hand touching it; or a speck of dust falling upon it. And it is wholesomely delicious to the last slice. It doesn't become stale and unpalatable if kept a few hours longer than usual.

Take Our Advice—Buy Wrapped Bread

By HALL & CO.,
14th and Monroe Sts.,
Washington, D. C.

The American people have been urged to stop wasting food. One of the worst wastes in stale bread that is thrown away. We believe in wrapped bread because a loaf that is properly wrapped keeps fresh until it is eaten.

And wrapped bread is clean—no hand touches it from the time it leaves the baker till it comes to your table.

Wrapped Bread is Clean

By A. M. HILLEARY,
Meats and Groceries,
3401 Dent Place,
Washington, D. C.

Your kitchen is clean, Mrs. Housewife, and you take a great deal of care to keep your food clean after you get it.

And don't you agree with us that a loaf of bread, made and wrapped in a clean bakery, untouched by hands until it reaches your home, is just one more step towards clean, wholesome food?

We Advocate Wrapped Bread

By W. G. WIDMAYER,
Meats and Provisions,
3321 Georgia Ave. N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

It is a well known fact that a loaf of bread properly wrapped in wax paper tends to keep its freshness and flavor longer than one which is not wrapped. And isn't it a satisfaction to know that the bread you are eating has not been handled or exposed to dust?

We Recommend Wrapped Bread for Economy

By BROOKE & HARRY, Inc.,
Premier Market and Grocery,
719 20th Street N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

Washington housewives are co-operating splendidly with the nationwide movement for preventing food waste.

We believe in the plan of wrapping bread, because you can buy wrapped bread plentifully without fear of it becoming stale before using. And it reaches your table clean, sweet, and wholesome, without losing its freshness and flavor.

Our Customers ask for Wrapped Bread

By LAKEWOOD MARKET CO.,
Hal. G. Nelson, Pres.,
1760 F Street N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

People who have tried wrapped bread always come back for more and are disappointed if they cannot get it. They like it because it does not dry out in a few hours—but is always fresh and delicious when the waxed wrapper is removed. And they like it because they know it is as clean as if baked in their own home.

Why Wrapped Bread Tastes Better

By H. E. LEHMAN,
Fancy Groceries, Fruits, Vegetables,
2406 14th Street N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

A loaf of bread that is properly wrapped at the bakery comes to your table with the delicious freshness of new bread.

When you pack a lunch for a picnic you are careful to wrap the sandwiches in waxed paper so that they may be moist and fresh when served. Try a loaf of wrapped bread—you'll taste the difference.

Wrapped Bread Keeps Fresh Over Sunday

By JOHN BRASHAW, Jr.,
817 A Street N. E.,
Washington, D. C.

You need not be afraid to stock up with enough bread to last over Sunday or holidays if you buy wrapped loaves.

Bread that is properly wrapped retains its moisture and its delicious home-made flavor, even when kept in the house longer than usual, and you'll have no stale bread to throw away.
